

Website Content Guide for Your Clinic

Prepared by your website developer, based on the NMC Public Notice on Ethical Advertising dated 6 October 2026. This note explains what you can and cannot put on your clinic website. The rules come from the National Medical Commission's guidelines on ethical advertising, issued on 6 October 2026. The goal is simple: your website should give patients honest information, not pressure them into treatment.

What you CAN put on your website

1. Clinic details: your clinic name, address, phone number, email, and a Google Maps location.
2. Working hours: your daily timings and an emergency contact number.
3. Your treatments: a list of the services you offer, with a short, simple description of each.
4. Doctor details: the doctor's name, degree, specialty, registration number, and the days they are available.
5. Clinic photos: your reception, waiting area, treatment rooms, and equipment. Make sure no patients appear in them.
6. Equipment information: facts about your machines, such as "We have a digital X-ray machine." Do not say it is the best.
7. Certificates and accreditations: only if you have them and they can be checked by others.
8. Fees (optional): if you want to show your charges, write them clearly and honestly.
9. Health tips: simple advice for patients, such as how to brush properly or what to do after a tooth extraction.
10. FAQs: answers to common questions, like "How long does a cleaning take?"
11. Contact options: a contact form, a booking button, or a "Call Now" button.
12. Formal announcements: news about the clinic opening, a change of address, a temporary closure, a return after a break, or a change in consultation fees.
13. Legal pages: a privacy policy, and a short note saying the website gives general information and does not replace a visit to the dentist.

What you should NOT put on your website

1. Big claims: words like "best," "No.1," "top," "leading," "most trusted," or "unmatched."
2. Promises of results: phrases like "guaranteed cure," "100% success," "painless treatment," or "miracle treatment."

3. Before and after photos: pictures showing treatment results.
4. Patient stories and reviews: you should not write, choose, or post testimonials for promotion.
5. Patient details: no patient names, faces, or medical information, even with good intentions.
6. Discounts and offers: no "free checkup," coupons, "limited-time offers," or gifts for visiting.
7. Fear-based messages: do not warn patients with lines like "Your teeth will fall out if you wait."
8. Fake or paid reviews: do not buy reviews, likes, or followers.
9. Doctor photos for promotion: a doctor's picture should not be used to advertise the clinic.
10. AI-made images or content: if you use AI, it must be clearly labelled as AI-generated. AI must never create fake patient photos or stories.
11. Paid rankings: do not pay for "top doctor" lists or search ranking claims.
12. Payment for referrals: never pay anyone for sending patients to you.
13. Comparisons: do not compare your clinic with other clinics.
14. Unproven treatments: do not promote "secret" or "new" cures that are not scientifically proven

Quick checklist before publishing

- Is every fact on the website true, and can it be verified?
- Have I avoided words like "best," "No.1," and "guaranteed"?
- Are there any patient photos, names, or stories?
- If yes, remove them. Are the doctor's details complete, including the registration number?
- If any image was made with AI, is it labelled?
- Is the privacy policy and disclaimer on the website?

These guidelines are written mainly for doctors registered under the NMC and for clinics under the Clinical Establishments Act. Dental clinics may fall under rules set by the State Dental Council or the Dental Council of India. Please check with the relevant council or a legal advisor before publishing the website.
